Non-verbal cues to convey confidence

1. Posture
    - Maintain a straight, upright stance whether sitting or standing.
    - Avoid slouching and closed-off postures like crossed arms, which may signal defensiveness.
    - An open, relaxed posture signals confidence and approachability.
2. Eye Contact
    - Make steady and appropriate eye contact to show engagement, interest, and sincerity.
    - Hold eye contact for about two to three seconds to convey involvement without being confrontational.
    - Avoid darting eyes, which can indicate insecurity.
3. Facial Expressions
    - Use a genuine smile to convey warmth and confidence.
    - Keep your facial expressions animated but natural to match your message and show enthusiasm.
    - Avoid frowning or expressions that suggest disinterest.
4. Purposeful Gestures
    - Use natural and purposeful hand and arm movements to emphasize points.
    - Avoid distracting mannerisms like fidgeting, tapping, or playing with hair or jewelry.
5. Movement and Presence
    - Move with purpose and avoid hurried or aimless motions.
    - Stand or walk with balanced, poised movements that project assurance.
6. Handshake
    - Offer a firm, confident handshake with full palm-to-palm contact when greeting.
7. Dress and Appearance
    - Dress appropriately for the occasion to reflect professionalism and self-respect, which reinforces confidence.

8. Active Listening Cues
    - Nod occasionally and maintain eye contact to show attentiveness and engagement.
9. Control Nervous Habits
    - Be mindful and minimize nervous behaviors like fidgeting, tapping, or wringing hands.

Applying these non-verbal cues helps PGDM students project confidence effectively in professional settings such as presentations, meetings, and client interactions by enhancing their credibility and trustworthiness.[1][2][3][4][5]
